Andreas and Jessica Bäckman's journey towards the TCR Europe Championship in 2020

The Bäckman siblings aim to bring home the title in 2020

The 2019 season in TCR Europe led to several podium spots for Andreas and Jessica Bäckman. Now they are fully investing in bringing home the title in 2020. Are you interested in becoming a part of their journey towards the goal? Read more about the Bäckman siblings exciting journey to the top of the TCR Europe championship!

Growing up in Sweden's largest military city Boden, the Bäckman siblings comes from a family with great interest in motorsport. Their uncle used to drive rallycross and is currently driving in rally, while their dad always has been fixing cars. But it was their mom who made the siblings' racing career dawn as she registered them to a go-kart school she read about in the newspaper. In 2006, both siblings had already started competing in go-karting, first locally, then nationally and in 2010 they entered the world stage to meet the world's leading drivers. After ten years of driving on karting tracks in Spain, France, Belgium, Germany, UK, Portugal, Las Vegas and New Orleans, they decided in 2017 to take the next step in their racing careers.

TAKING THE STEP TO RALLYCROSS FOR NEW EXPERIENCES

Andreas and Jessica now began to drive rallycross, which in addition to asphalt also includes gravel and significantly larger cars that requires a completely different driving technique. This meant new challenges but in the long term, it gave them a significant experience of car control and the siblings have learned the fascination with shorter races, where it is important to be alert already from the start.

READY TO MEET EUROPE'S RACING ELITE

For 2018, Andreas and Jessica took the step up to racing and started to compete in Touring Cars. During the year they competed in the STCC, the Scandinavian Touring Car Championship, as well as in the British counterpart TCR UK. They also did an appearance in the European series TCR Europe. In car-racing, they could safely lean on the experience of go-karting and rallycross. Although a touring car is much larger and heavier than the previous cars they competed with, the driving technique was more like a go-kart. In 2019, the siblings decided to make a full-time switch to the TCR Europe championship with their new team Target Competition and their new Hyundai i30 N TCR-cars.

TCR EUROPE PODIUM SPOTS BROUGHT A DESIRE FOR MORE

When Hyundai Motorsport GmbH launched their major junior project in 2019: Hyundai Motorsport Customer Racing Junior Driver (an initiative that promotes selected, promising racing stars), Andreas and Jessica were elected. This includes coaching, developing training and professional media management, and the support was definitely a factor in the siblings' success during the year. Andreas, for example, had a victory in the TCR Europe event in Barcelona and took two consecutive pole-positions during the season, while Jessica took podium spots in three different championships (TCR Europe, TCR Germany and TCR Scandinavia) during the year. The good results have definitely provided a desire for more and the siblings are now fully investing in bringing home the title in 2020 – and reaching their future goal of competing in the World Cup, the WTCR series.

Andreas Bäckman

Andreas got his karting license in 2005 at Luleå's karting school in Sweden. He started his racing career the year after in the North Swedish Championship, and soon drove in many races in Sweden before he started his international career in 2010. In the years that followed Andreas raced around the world, with competitions and successes in Spain, France, Belgium, Germany, England, Portugal, Las Vegas and New Orleans. During 2014–2016 he drove for the factory-team Kosmic, in the Formula 1 of Karting.

In the long run, I want to challenge the competition and become the best racing driver in the world. To reach that point, I need to be able to do this for a living so that I can focus on continuing my development.

In 2018, Andreas took the step up to Racing and started to compete in Touring Cars. During the season he competed in STCC, Scandinavian Touring Car Championship, and also in the British counterpart TCR UK. He also did an appearance in the European series TCR Europe, where he later on competed and achieved one win and two consecutive pole-positions in 2019.

My main strength is that I'm consistent, which means I usually always reach top results. I'm constantly working on improving my lowest level to become as good as I possibly can. In addition, I spend a lot of time on physical training and following all motorsport – it's my way of keeping up-to-date.

Jessica Bäckman

Jessica Bäckman started at a karting school when she was seven years old, but had to wait for two more years before she was old enough to take her license. In 2006, she made her debut in the North Swedish Championship, and continued to compete in Stockholm as well as in the south of Sweden and internationally. In 2014–2015, she started to drive for the Italian factory team Kosmic, in a series similar to the Formula 1 of Karting. It brought tough and hard races that provided a very good training for the future.

The goal for 2020 is to compete for the podium places in the championship, to reach the world elite in the TCR: World Touring Car Championship WTCR in 2021.

In 2017 Jessica, just like her brother Andreas, started with rallycross and in 2018, Jessica competed in the Scandinavian Touring Car Championship, STCC. She also competed in the British counterpart TCR UK, where she safely could lean against her experiences of both karting and rallycross. Jessica entered 2019 with both a new car, a new team and a new championship and she ended up reaching no less than three podium finishes during the season.

My strength is that I truly enjoy to race, which means that if I see a gap, then I'm going for it. I'm also good at staying calm even when it doesn't turn out as I had imagined sometimes.

The Team

The siblings each run a Hyundai i30 N TCR car for one of the absolute best TCR teams, Target Competition, which has a big track record.

The team was founded in 2004 by Andreas and Markus Gummerer and is today one of Europe's most qualified racing teams.

In 2015, the team won both the driver and team championships in the international series TCR International. In 2017, Target Competition became team champion in TCR Europe. After a disappointing 2018 season, the team was back in 2019 and managed to win both the TCR Europe Drivers' and Teams' Championship. Heading into 2020, the team aims to defend both their titles. The team was founded in 2004 by Andreas and Markus Gummerer and is today one of Europe's most qualified racing teams.

TCR Europe stands for Touring Car Racing Europe and is the European series for Touring Cars. The series holds seven events around Europe and is the second largest series in TCR after the World Touring Car Cup, WTCR. The TCR concept has flourished worldwide and established itself in competitive series at both international and national levels. TCR Europe ran its first season in 2018, replaced the TCR Europe Trophy (a competition that was previously held once a year) and then founded a new European Championship for TCR cars.

In 2019, over 37 drivers competed in the TCR Europe series and the level is extremely high, thanks to the participation of elite drivers from all over Europe. The 2018 champion Mikel Azcona took the step up to the WTCR for the 2019 season, which shows that TCR Europe enables a natural and direct entry into the World Cup.

All races are broadcasted live on social media at JA Bäckman's Facebook page and at TCR TV on YouTube.
